

The Anglo-Boer War And French Caricature: Alfred Le Petit, 1841-1909

PREFACE

The Rand Afrikaans University is planning a limited but hopefully varied and stimulating programme this year as its contribution to the celebrations of the Anglo-Boer War centenary.

As part of this programme, the library of the University is, inter alia, contributing this publication of sketches and caricatures by the famous Alfred Le Petit - a French painter, sketcher, journalist and songwriter of the last century. He was famous for his illustrations and sketches on topical issues of the day, which demonstrated great powers of irony, incisive political and social commentary and a keen observation and sense of humour.

His cartoons on the Anglo-Boer War, which captured the interest and imagination of Europe, reveal Alfred Le Petit as a brilliant and sophisticated political commentator. He comments on the progress of the War and the characters involved in the War. He captures many important nuances of the War. His political bias is clear; he favours the small Boer Republics resisting the invasion and military might of a world power.

He represented in many respects the views of Europe on the War, which were sympathetic to the Boers - many French, German, Dutch, Polish and Russian volunteers fought on the Boer side. It is perhaps appropriate to recall the French Boer General De Villebois-Mareuil, who was the leader of the European Legion supporting the Boer forces. He died on the battlefield on 5 April 1900 at Boshof, where the British under Lord Methuen buried him with full military honours. In 1971 he was re-buried at Magersfontein.

The Rand Afrikaans University trusts that this publication will preserve an important political and cultural aspect of perhaps the last colonial war on African soil.
